Die Literaturlisten im Buch sind beschränkt auf Bücher in deutscher Sprache, die Ende 2005 im Buchhandel verfügbar waren, sowie auf die wichtigsten Titel der wissenschaftlichen Originalliteratur. In der folgenden Liste finden Sie weitere Arbeiten, die für das Thema wesentlich sind; sie enthält auch einzelne Beiträge in Sammelbänden, die in "Warum wir immer das Falsche vergessen" nur als Buch zitiert waren.

Ergänzende Literatur:

Ackerman, L, Beier, ME, Boyle, MO (2005): Working memory and intelligence: the same or different constructs? Psychological Bulletin, 131:30-60

Beuscher, E, Roebers, CM (2005): Does a warning help children to more accurately remember an event, to resist misleading questions, and to identify unanswerable questions? Experimental Psychology, 52:232-241

Craik, FIM (2002): Levels of processing: Past, present ... and future? Memory, 10: 305-318

Huber, R, Ghilardi, MF, Massimini, M, Tononi, G (2004): Local sleep and learning. nature, 430: 78-81

II

Kersten, AW, Earles, JL (2004): Semantic context influences memory for words more than memory for nouns. Memory, 32:198-211

List, G (2005): Gehirnforschung und Fremdsprachenunterricht. Was wäre dem Gehirn denn 'fremd'? Vortrag auf der Jahrestagung des Berufsverbandes Deutsch als Fremdsprache, Jena

Loftus, EF (2005): Searching for the neurobiology of the misinformation effects. Learning and Memory, 12:1-2

May, CP, Hasher, L, Foong, N (2005): Implicit memory, age, and time of day. Pardoxical priming effects. Psychological Science, 16:96-100

Panegyred, PK (2004): The contribution of the study of neurodegenerative disorders to the understanding of human memory. Review. Q. J. of Medicine, 97: 555-567

Sternberg, RJ (1999): Human intelligence: a case study of how more and more research can lead us to know less and less about a psychological phenomenon, until finally we know much less than we did before we started doing research. in: Tulving, Endel (Ed): Memory, Consciousness and the Brain. The Tallinn-Conference. Ann Arbor, pp. 363-373

Stuss, DT, Alexander, MP (2005): Does damage to the frontal lobes produce impairment in memory? Current Directions in Psychological Science, 14: 84-88

Winkler, I, Cowan, N (2005): From sensory to long-term memory. Evidence from aditory memory reactivation studies. Experimental Psychology, 52:3-20

Woodman, GF, Vogel, EK (2005): Fractionating working memory. Consolidation and maintenance are independent processes. Psychological Science, 16:106-113

